History of the Club House Hotel

One of the Longest Surviving hotels in the country, the Club House Hotel Kilkenny was established in 1797 and was bought by Jim Brennan its present owner over the 40 years ago.

Known throughout its history as the Foxhounds Club, The Hibernian and Club House Hotel, the hostelry passed through five families.

Originally the home of the Prim Family, the House became the headquarters of the Kilkenny Hunt Club in 1797 with rooms for Dining, Dancing and Accommodation. It was developed into a commercial Hotel in 1817 by James Rice, steward of the Hunt Club, and his partner John Walsh.

When Rice died, Walsh sold the hotel to Simon & John Morris who changed the name to the Club House Hotel

Simon Morris used often tell of the great performance of a Mr Jack Courtney of the Ballyedmond, Co Cork who on the back of his horse (to decide a wager) rode his steed from the Club House Stables up the hotel stairs in the club room, Jumped a fire screen and rode back down to the stables

The Hotel later passed to Thomas Murphy in 1888 and when he died in 1922 was run by his daughters. A Twenty bedroom extension in 1968 and then years later the Brennan Family acquired the Club House Hotel, carrying out a major refurbishment in 1988, extending the bar in 1993 adding a further 10 bedrooms in 1995 and restoring the collection of Spy Cartoons which adorn the walls.

Today the Club House Hotel boasts 28 guest bedrooms, Victors Bar & Restaurant, as well as number of private rooms catering for conferences, wedding & functions. Known as Kilkennys Vintage Hotel it welcomes corporate clients and holiday makers as well as an abundance of local customers who frequent the hotel on a regular basis for fine food, friendly service in a renowned "home from home" atmosphere
